Nasdaq Extends Trading In U.S. Equities To 23 Hours A Day, Five Days A Week

On January 8, 2026, Nasdaq filed a proposed rule change with the SEC that would fundamentally alter the U.S. equities trading landscape by extending Nasdaq's trading hours to 23 hours per day, five days per week. The proposal was approved in April 2026 and will allow trading of Nasdaq-listed equity securities and exchange-traded products almost around the clock, marking one of the most significant market-structure changes in decades the extended trading hours take effect on December 6, 2026. While the rule change is framed as a response to growing global demand for overnight trading—particularly from investors outside the United States—it raises important considerations for public companies, market participants, and regulators.
